Describe four situations (examples) where information systems affect society.

Maximum 300 words.

In this essay, I intent to explain to you four situations where information systems (IS) affect our society, which are as follows:

To begin with, we usually use IS to manage, organise and synchronize all public and private transport means.

Furthermore, IS allows us to communicate wherever we need and want, linking distant zones and enabling connecting people distributed throughout our planet.

Moreover, IS is also required to enable streaming videoconferences and entertainment media content consumption.

On the other hand, IS helps us to be able to process a considerable and exponential amount of information available.

Last but not least, it has helped us to create and enable alternative communication means such as braille screen or haptical reading.

In conclusion, a large number of interesting new solutions have appeared through information systems existence, and it represents a great human kind achivement.
